miles north of the Warm Springs. Several other men had narrow escapes, but were not injured.

According to the statements of eye witnesses, Mangene was putting in a blast underneath a large rock which weighed about 1,000 pounds. He was standing mader the boulder and was applying a cap and fuse when suddenly, without warning, the rock lossened and rolled down the hill.

It passed over Mangene's body and neck, almost severaing the head. The skull was crushed, probably causing instantaneous death. Four men who were working close by narrowly escaped being caught by the falling stone.

The body was brought into S. D. Evans' undertaking parlors last night and Coroner Frank Clark notified. It ass not been decided yet whether an inquest is necessary. Mangene is a native of Italy, and had been in this country about three years. He had been employed at the quarry since last September. He leaves a wife and family residing in Italy.
